Ripple
SCARF

Ripple stitches are a great way to use handpaint yarns of all weights - their naturally undulating stitches make simple stripes look more complicated than they are.

This scarf is worked in two colours, changing every second row, but you may use an infinite number of yarns - perfect for stash busting - or try just one fabulous multi-coloured yarn. Three stitches on each edge are worked as garter stitches on each side so that the scarf borders won't curl. You could widen this edge to six or more stitches or change it to another non-curly pattern such as seed stitch.

This is a great way to use handpaint yarns of all weights.
